Rev. G. P. F. Howard has been a sailor in the merchant marine and in the United States navy, a teacher in a negro school, a justice of the peace, a lawyer, the principal of a large school, a college professor and a preacher of the gospel. He was born in Edmon ton, England, about forty-five years ago. His mother died when he was about a year old. His father, if he is efficient for itching piles and remedy for sore nipples, ands, chilblains, frost bites still alive, is a retired London police-man. His name as a boy was Frederic Atryde Howlett, and it was as Frederic Howlett that he began his American career as a sailor in the navy in 1874, and he kept his name for a number of years while he taught a negro school at Smoke's Cross Roads, Colleton county, S. C., and as a justice of the peace and a lawyer at Walterboro, S. C.

It was at this time that his criminal career began, and he ran away to es cape the service of a warrant for his ar-rest. He was next heard of at Port Robbins, S. C., where he induced the wife of a railroad man named Brown to run off with him. He imposed upon Alexander Stephens and Judge Lumpkin until they discovered that the woman whom he introduced as his wife was Mrs. Brown, and then he was driven out of town. He appeared next at Fayetteville, Ga., where he called himself Frederick Howard, and practiced law with Eugene Blaylock as his partner. Here be joined the Baptist Church and was received by the best people until Judge Lumpkin's mother recognized him, told his story, and drove him out of town again.

At Atlanta, where he went later, he was at the head of a big school and married a Mrs. Burk, a sister of Congressman Cobbinness and Editor Cobbinness, of the Atlanta Journal. Here, through Dr. Gwynn, he was taken into the Baptist ministry and later became the pastor of the First Baptist Church at Jackson, Tenn. This was in 1881, and when he arrived at Jackson he called himself George Frederick Burgoyne Howard and said he came of a distinguished English family. His eloquence and general air of accomplishment led to his being made professor of moral philosophy at the Southwest-ern Baptist University, and Auburn University of Alabama made him a

The first wife having died he was married again in Jackson to Miss Liz-zie Hughes, a member of a good fami-ly. In Jackson he established a new church and also a newspaper, the True Baptist, and it was out of a warfare that he made upon the Southwestern University in this paper that his history again became known. *He sued the Blade of Jackson for $50,000 damages, and in preparing for the defence Howard's history was gathered from his youth. He got a verdict of one cent damages and had to pay the costs ostensibly to practice law.

He lived on Staten Island, kept a yacht, and confessed a new creed of occultism, which he called the true Brahminism as it was before the days of Buddha. He talked of his mother bening hear a Resum of Ludio The having been a Begum of Iudia, who left him the title of Prince of Prenagaya, and said that he had been a member of Parliament, a soldier in India, and that he was a Knight Commander and that he was a Kuight Commander of the Order of the Bath and a member of the Order of the Garter. It was during these of the Garter. It was during these later years that he entered into the

A Valuable Prescription. Editor Morrison of the Worthington, Ind., "Sun," writes: "You have a valuable prescription in Electric Bitters, and I can cheerfully recommend it for Constipation and Sick Headache, and as a general system tonic it has no veilance when he was about the front office. The only reasonable theory as to his escape is that the outside sentinels became careless and allowed Howard to pass them by unnoticed.
